Outcome of the Fifty-sixth World Health Assembly

1. The Fifty-sixth World Health Assembly dealt with an extremely heavy agenda, covering: the review and approval of WHO’s proposed programme budget for 2004-2005; the adoption of the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control; the election of Dr J.-W. Lee as Director-General; 19 subitems under Technical and health matters; financial and management matters; collaboration within the United Nations system and with other intergovernmental organizations; health conditions of, and assistance to, the Arab population in the occupied Arab territories, including Palestine; policy for relations with nongovernmental organizations; staffing matters; and governing body matters. In all, the Health Assembly adopted the 35 resolutions and two decisions approved by Committees A and B. The adoption of the Framework Convention was recognized as a historic occasion, as it is the first international treaty negotiated under the auspices of WHO.

2. In her report to the Health Assembly, the Director-General referred to the outbreak of severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS) as the first new epidemic of the twenty-first century, citing it as an example of the crucial need to share information, expertise and resources. SARS was also the subject of a technical briefing and information exchange which was well attended by ministers and other delegates.

COMMITTEE A

3. Committee A, in its discussion of the framework convention on tobacco control, unanimously supported the draft resolution with its annexed text of the Convention. Delegates praised the hard work of all those involved in the negotiation of the Convention, but emphasized that the work was far from over.

4. When considering the item on the Programme budget, the Committee also discussed the subitem on assessments for 2004-2005 which had been transferred from Committee B, so that the budget items could be deliberated together. After considerable negotiation, three draft resolutions were approved by consensus: appropriation resolution for the financial period 2004-2005; scale of assessments for the financial period 2004-2005; and adjustment mechanism.

5. The Committee approved a draft resolution that took note of the global health-sector strategy for HIV/AIDS. During the debate, delegates stressed the need for innovative training as a preventive measure, enhanced maternal and child health services and reproductive health services, and respect for human rights as a guiding principle.

6. The Committee considered a report on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the International Conference on Primary Health Care held in Alma-Ata, and approved a draft resolution that calls on the Director-General to convene a meeting inter alia that will review definitions and strategies and identify future directions, and continue to incorporate the principles of primary health care into the activities of all WHO’s programmes. During the Committee’s deliberations, speakers stressed the importance of renewing commitment to providing primary health care services, especially to poor and disadvantaged people.

7. A draft resolution on the Pan African tsetse and trypanosomiasis eradication campaign was approved by consensus. Delegates noted that trypanosomiasis is potentially eradicable through a sustained and coordinated effort. The Committee took note of the report on control of neurocysticercosis, a disease that can be better controlled through investment in prevention and hygiene.

9. A draft resolution on traditional medicine, intended to respect and preserve traditional medical knowledge, while enhancing the safety and efficacy of its use, was approved by consensus.

10. Two draft resolutions were approved under the subitem on child and adolescent health and development: one on reducing global measles mortality and the other on a strategy for child and adolescent health and development. Delegates strongly endorsed the strategy, while emphasizing the need for further research on the nature and determinants of risk behaviour in adolescents, such as obesity, smoking, alcohol consumption, use of cannabis and other substances, and sexual behaviour. The need to improve coverage of child and adolescent health services was emphasized, and WHO was urged to increase its budget allocations in this area.

11. Committee A also considered a subitem on strengthening nursing and midwifery. There was unanimous agreement on the need for interventions in human resources planning and capacity building, personnel management, evidence-based practice, education and stewardship.

12. Under the subitem on revision of the International Health Regulations, two draft resolutions were proposed and approved. One, on SARS, pays tribute to the dedication and self-sacrifice of health care workers, including the late Dr Carlo Urbani of WHO. The resolution recognizes the need for rapid sharing of information on disease outbreaks and calls for strengthened international efforts to control them. The resolution on the revision of the International Health Regulations acknowledges the close links between the Regulations and WHO’s outbreak alert and response activities and, particularly in light of the SARS outbreak, emphasizes the urgent need for WHO and its international partners to finalize the revision of the Regulations for consideration by the Fifty-eighth World Health Assembly in 2005.

13. Committee A also debated a draft resolution on intellectual property rights, innovation and public health, which was eventually approved by consensus, and took note of the report on smallpox eradication: destruction of Variola virus stocks.
