III. Technical briefings

The following technical briefings will take place during the Sixty-eighth World Health Assembly.

Wednesday, 20 May 2015 12:30–14:15 Room XII

Climate and health

There will be interpretation in Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish

In December 2015 in Paris, the Conference of the Parties (COP) 21 will aim to reach a global climate change agreement. A successful agreement would help to avoid the health risks of continuing environmental degradation, support health resilience to climate risks, and provide an opportunity for major health gains from climate change mitigation policies, including the reduction of over seven million annual deaths from air pollution.

This technical briefing will provide health ministries with an overview of the current climate negotiation process, highlight entry points for health, and provide examples of evidence and best practices to support a strong and health-promoting agreement in December 2015.

Thursday, 21 May 2015 12:30–14:15 Room XII

Getting to 2018: Preparing for the third UN High-level Meeting on Noncommunicable Diseases

There will be interpretation in Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish

Remarkable progress has been achieved at national level in addressing noncommunicable diseases (NCDs) during the past years, including an increase in the number of countries which have an operational national NCD policy with a budget for implementation from 32% of countries in 2010 to 50% of countries in 2013. Many countries have started to align their policies and resources with the nine global NCD targets and the WHO global action plan for the prevention and control of NCDs 2013–2020 to make unparalleled gains.

This technical briefing will explore the following questions: How are countries implementing their NCD commitments? What are the challenges countries face? How will countries catalyse the next phase of NCD prevention and control in the post-2015 era? How are countries monitoring progress?

Friday, 22 May 2015 12:30–14:15 Room XII

Cancer prevention and control: which policies and programmes have best driven progress?

There will be interpretation in Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish

The increasing burden of cancer places an enormous strain on health-care systems. This technical briefing provides delegates with an overview of what works in cancer prevention and control and gathers views from Member States about the progress made and priority actions undertaken to curb the cancer epidemic as an integral part of implementing the national commitments included in the 2011 UN Political Declaration and 2014 UN Outcome Document on NCDs, taking into account the WHO Global NCD Action Plan 2013–2020. It will also be an opportunity to discuss how WHO plans to scale up its response to support national cancer control efforts and how the International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) – 50 years on from its establishment by the Eighteenth World Health Assembly – is able to provide robust scientific evidence for cancer control.
Changing the trajectory of three epidemics – HIV, viral hepatitis and sexually transmitted infections – through the development of global health sector strategies

There will be interpretation in Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish

This technical briefing will provide an update on the development of three of the 2016–2021 global health sector strategies: HIV, hepatitis, and sexually transmitted infections. These health issues pose major public health burdens for all regions and will be key elements of the post-2015 health agenda. While recognizing many successes to date, progress remains uneven and inequitable. New medicines, technologies, approaches and commitments provide new opportunities. The 2016–2021 strategies will seek to build on past successes, accelerate respective health sector responses and ensure alignment with the emerging Sustainable Development Goals framework. This technical briefing will discuss how Member States and partners are approaching new strategic opportunities to change the trajectory of their responses, ensure linkages across the three areas, and optimize new and emerging innovations.

V. Arrangements for conduct of discussion in plenary meetings

Resolution WHA52.21 on reform of the Health Assembly requested the Director-General to make appropriate arrangements for a shortened plenary meeting and, to this end, encouraged group or regional statements in plenary debate. Delegates are requested to limit their statements to five minutes (550 words) in this debate.

Theme of general discussion: “building resilient health systems”

The Ebola virus disease (EVD) outbreak has shone a light on vulnerable health systems both in West Africa and across the world. Even as WHO and partners continue working on early recovery activities to reactivate essential health services, it is clear that one of the long term lessons of the EVD outbreak in West Africa is the importance of resilient health systems as cornerstones of strong societies.

In their comments Ministers may wish to draw on their own national experience to address some of the following questions: what are their national main components of resilience; what does building resilient health systems mean in the context of their national system; how can International Health Regulations (2005) (IHR) capacities be best integrated within the overall health system development in their country; what are the best indicators and targets for monitoring progress on building resilient health systems; and how can WHO best support Member States in these efforts?
