12.8 Global Strategy for Women’s, Children’s, Adolescent’s Health (2016-2030)

Mr Chairman,

We would like to thank the WHO for focusing our attention on several elements of the Global strategy. We wish to share with you three points that received attention of our experts:

Child and family centered multisectorial approach

- To para 21 Slovakia highlights with appreciation that the report calls for a child- and family-centered multisectoral approach to programming that takes into account the health, nutrition, environmental, psychosocial and learning needs of all children and adolescents to achieve their full potential.

- We are pleased to inform that in January Slovakia implemented standardized procedures based on clinical guideline of psychomotoric development in early childhood. This new approach based on supportive evidence and on parents and family centered approach was successfully presented this year in April at the European Confederation of Primary Care Paediatricians (ECPCP) Conference in Bratislava.

A global platform on essential policies on sexual, reproductive, maternal, newborn, child and adolescent health

To Para 49 and the following Slovakia notes with interest WHO accelerated global and regional activities leading to a global platform to track the adoption and implementation of essential policies on sexual, reproductive, maternal, newborn, child and adolescent health in all countries.

We would like this platform to include evidence on country measures and standardized approaches to support the natural methods of fertility control, diagnostic and treatment that attract professional and general public in our country and others in central European region.

Sexual and reproductive health to humanitarian and emergency settings

To Para 48 and related on the adaptation of WHO’s existing guidelines on sexual and reproduction health to humanitarian and emergency:
We welcome the interest and hard work in addressing the issue, and we emphasize the ethical approaches as the inevitable part of standardized patient safety solutions in health care addressing stigmatization, vulnerability and trauma in humanitarian and emergency settings.

Thank you.
