

DISEASES SUBJECT TO THE REGULATIONS — MALADIES SOUMISES AU RÈGLEMENT

Under the International Health Regulations (1969), the "infected area" is defined on epidemiological principles by the health administration reporting the disease in its country and need not correspond to administrative boundaries. It is that part of its territory which, because of population characteristics, density and mobility and/or vector and animal reservoir potential, could support transmission of the reported disease."

When notifying the existence of a disease in their territory, health administrations should indicate the area considered as infected on the basis of the above-mentioned definition.

Aux termes du Règlement sanitaire international de 1969, la zone infectée est « définie sur la base de principes épidémiologiques par l'administration sanitaire qui signale l'existence de la maladie dans son pays et ne correspondant pas nécessairement à des limites administratives. C'est une partie de son territoire qui, en raison des caractéristiques de la population (densité, mobilité) et du potentiel des vecteurs et des réservoirs animaux, pourrait se prêter à la transmission de la maladie signalée ».

Il appartient donc aux administrations sanitaires qui notifient la présence de la maladie sur leur territoire de préciser la zone qui doit être considérée comme étant infectée, en tenant compte de la définition ci-dessus.
